

Designed to showcase writers of the Southwest, Blue Mesa, an annual publication, was founded in 1989. This first issue to be published since the retirement of founding editor Rudolfo Anaya stands as a testimonial to Anaya's pioneering role in obtaining recognition for the literature of the region, especially for the work of Chicano writers. A moving tribute to Anaya by award-winning author Dagoberto Gilb leads off an issue that, in the best Blue Mesa tradition, depicts the crazy-quilt New West--the Wild West where, to quote contributor William S. Barnes, you can see to the mountain tops, you can buy a double-wide for cheap, and you can get your aura balanced. Rich in poems and stories set in Mexican border towns and on Indian reservations, this issue also ranges far afield--to Hawaii, the Philippines, and Vietnam, to Montana, to New England, to Europe. Among the contributors are Adrian C. Louis, Alma Garcia, Carolyn Lei-Lanilau, and Nancy Esposito.
