

Raised by her grandparents after her mother and father are killed in an automobile accident, Julie Fallon returns to the ranch she was born on. Fed up with city life and a job that requires too much travel, she returns to the ranch where her grandfather is now all alone. When she arrives, she is stunned to discover her grandfather expects her to marry the owner of the neighboring ranch, Seth Berrett, who has been helping Gramps with running his ranch. In fact, marrying Seth is the only way she'll inherit the ranch. The ranch she feels is her birthright and should be hers without having to marry anyone. Thrown together with Seth in back to back blizzards, Julie loses her grandfather when he succumbs to his illness and learns she has only thirty days to marry Seth or the ranch will be put up for sale. To add insult to injury, Seth isn't just your ordinary cowboy. No, he's the kind of cowboy who's made it his mission to paddle her bottom whenever he thinks she needs it. Her grandfather's will states they must be married for at least ten years or the ranch will be sold. Should she just forget living on the ranch and go back to the job she's grown to hate or can Julie resign herself to enduring a minimum of ten years of marriage to the spanking cowboy? Warning: This story contains scenes involving adult spanking, and sexually explicit acts between consenting adults. All characters are adults.
