

I have been starting or involved in our seven companies the past seven years “ and I must admit that every moment that I have been running these companies, it has been with needs of qualifications that haven’t been within mine “ or simply had more work than I was capable of doing within my awaken hours. So you hear this advice from an entrepreneur that have learned this the hard way, by just making the mistakes “ and trying to figure things out for a busy day. That also means that I have had to do everything on small budgets, as I have always had a high priority on the earnings to make the business run. I all seven years I have never had any start capital, overdraft or similar arrangements “ and always managed to keep things together on the principle of creating the money streams before investing them in outsourcing it. As you are reading my book, I’m sure you will have questions that you will look for answers for “ and for that I will throughout my book give you links, etc. for sources that might be helpful. Throughout my book I try hard to be very honest with you, I tell actual story cases where you will see a lot of the details of my experiences. Both failure and success. This book is written for you who wouldn’t have time to read a book “ as it might not be your thing. So it’s written as storytelling “ so make it easily readable “ and so you hopefully will get quickly to the end “ so you get the most out of this book. You are more than welcome to drop me an email, with any questions that you might have “ and I will try to point you in the right direction. I will be honest with you “ and tell that I do have a very busy life, but I will make a great effort in helping my readers as well as possible “ so please be patient. Usually, I reply to most emails within a couple of weeks, but there might be reasons for that there can be delays. You will be guaranteed to get a response, no matter if I can help you or not “ as I’m not afraid to admit if you are asking questions within the area where I don’t feel confident about having the experience required to give you a good response.
