

if only, if only: The Evolution and Destruction of Stephen Kings Teacher Archetype in Rage and Carrie is an analysis of Stephen Kings use of teachers in his three early works: Rage, Carrie and Brian De Palmas 1976 film version of Carrie. Using examples from the two novels and film, as well as analysis from King scholars, I chart the path of the creation of Kings idea of a Teacher Archetype, one that bears great importance on our lives and the lives of the children who these teachers hold in their care. Author Biography: Steven Krage has an Associates of Arts Degree from College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Illinois. His musical journey started in Fourth Grade, when he was taken to see an English-language production of Mozarts Die Zauberflote. He has since tirelessly researched opera, eventually taking voice lessons to further his understanding of the craft. As a result, he has become an accomplished bass-baritone, performing everything from the early music works of Monteverdi and Handel, to Mozart and even more modern composers such as John Adams, Philip Glass and John Harbison. He recently essayed the role of Figaro (Mozarts Le Nozze di Figaro) in College of DuPages Opera Workshop Recital, A Little Mozart Music. He has also performed with many of the Chicago Suburbs most prestigious choral groups, including the New Classic Singers. With the New Classic Singers, he has performed also with many guest artists, including bassist Rich Armandi, and the Shanghai Women Entrepreneur Choir. He also performed with the NCS when they premiered composer Lee Kesselman's Kaddish for my Father. In Fall 2012, he performed with NCS at the International Beethoven Project, including a performance of a choral work by Mikolaj Gorecki with the composer in attendance. At College of DuPage he has performed for several semesters in the auditioned Chamber Singers as well as the non-auditioned Concert Choir and DuPage Chorale. He is also the conductor/leader of the Glee Club at Cordia Senior Residence and is a periodicals clerk at Addison Public Library. In addition to performing operatic and choral music, he has also written many essays on opera, focusing his study on often-forgotten characters and their origins. He also plays the Harpsichord. In addition, he is the recent recipient of the COD John Belushi Memorial Choral Music Scholarship (Spring 2012.) He is also a composer of music, having written over 20 pieces for orchestra, choir, solo voices, speaking voices, flute, piano, violin, viola, cello, string quartet, trumpet, organ, harpsichord and chamber ensemble. In addition to his musical ventures, he is an avid Actor. He has recently appeared in productions of Neil Simon's The Odd Couple (Vinnie) and Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water (Axel Magee.) He is also a successful journalist and his writing, while once being described as snarky and vicious, has also been described as beautiful and lyrical and impeccably researched. In addition to writing essays and blogs, he is a playwright; his short play, Misfortune, was performed twice to great acclaim. A lauded interviewer, his interviewing style was described by Author January Jones (Thou Shalt Not Whine: The Eleventh Commandment and Jackie, Ari and Jack: The Tragic Love Triangle) as such: I have done over 500 TV and radio interviews on the Kennedys and Stevens questions are by far the best ones that Ive, ever, ever been asked. He is the author of The Mistakes of a Better World, a book of essays and short stories on a variety of subjects (available on ETSY.com and Amazon.) His next book, The Mistresses of All Evil: The Classic Disney Villainesses and The Women Who Played Them, is forthcoming from Theme Park Press.
